A: Solid Nodules*		Size		Comments
Nodule Type	<6 mm (<100 mm)	6-8 mm (100-250 mm)	>8 mm (>250 mm)
Single
Low risk*	No routine follow-up	CT at 6-12 months, then consider CT at 18-24 months	Consider CT at 3 months, PET/CT, or tissue sampling	Nodules <6 mm do not require routine follow-up in low-risk patients (recommendation 1A).
High risk*	Optional CT at 12 months	CT at 6-12 months, then CT at 18-24 months	Consider CT at 3 months, PET/CT, or tissue sampling	Certain patients at high risk with suspicious nodule morphology, upper lobe location, or both may warrant 12-month follow-up (recommendation 1A).
Multiple
Low risk*	No routine follow-up	CT at 3-6 months, then consider CT at 18-24 months	CT at 3-6 months, then consider CT at 18-24 months	Use most suspicious nodule as guide to management. Follow-up intervals may vary according to size and risk (recommendation 2A).
High risk*	Optional CT at 12 months	CT at 3-6 months, then at 18-24 months	CT at 3-6 months, then at 18-24 months	Use most suspicious nodule as guide to management. Follow-up intervals may vary according to size and risk (recommendation 2A).
B: Subsolid Nodules*
Nodule Type		Size		Comments
		<6 mm (<100 mm)	≥6 mm (>100 mm)
Single
Ground glass	No routine follow-up	CT at 6-12 months to confirm persistence, then CT every 2 years until 5 years		In certain suspicious nodules < 6 mm, consider follow-up at 2 and 4 years. If solid components or growth direction, consider resection. (recommendations 3A and 4A).
Part solid	No routine follow-up	CT at 3-6 months to confirm persistence. If unchanged and solid component remains < 6 mm, annual CT should be performed for 5 years.		In practice, part-solid nodules cannot be defined as such until ≥6 mm, and nodules < 6 mm do not usually require follow-up. Persistent part-solid nodules with solid components ≥6 mm should be considered highly suspicious (recommendations 4A-4C).
Multiple
	CT at 3-6 months, if stable, consider CT at 2 and 4 years.	CT at 3-6 months. Subsequent management based on the most suspicious nodule(s).		Multiple < 6 mm pure ground-glass nodules are usually benign, but consider follow-up in selected patients at high risk at 2 and 4 years (recommendation 5A).

MEETING ABSTRACT Open Access

NICE guidelines

Stephen Pilling
 From 1st International Congress on Neurobiology and Clinical Psychopharmacology and European Psychiatric Association Conference on Treatment Guidance
 Thessaloniki, Greece, 19-22 November 2009

This presentation will outline the programme of clinical practice guidelines developed by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) in the UK. This programme consists of over 20 clinical guidelines and covers all the major mental disorders. The methodological challenges in its development will be described, including the limitations of the evidence base and some commonly made criticisms of the NICE approach to clinical guideline development. The major successes of the programme will be described including work on schizophrenia, substance misuse and more generally on psychological therapies. The importance of a broad approach to supporting guideline implementation will be emphasised and illustrated by the development of the UK Department of Health Improving Access to Psychological Therapies (IAPT) programme and related work on therapist training and competence.

It is important to note that the advice contained within the guidance does not override or replace the individual responsibility of health professionals to make appropriate decisions in the circumstances of their individual patients, in consultation with the patient and/or guardian or carer. This would, for example, include situations where individual patients have other conditions or complications that need to be taken into account in determining whether the NICE guidance is fully appropriate in their case. Clinical guidelines frequently make reference to specific legislation and guidance that do not apply in Northern Ireland. All clinical guidelines should be read taking these differences into consideration.
